King Charles Spaniels

A flattering entry and in general I was very pleased with the overall quality. Most importantly there were no major health concerns and the majority of exhibits were physically and mentally sound and happy. The breed is in desperate need for new supporters who are prepared to devote time and efforts to maintain the classical type of the King Charles Spaniel. Fortunately there are still few long-term breeders and exhibitors around and newcomers are highly recommended to seek advice when it comes to correct breed type which has been handed down for many generations. I was quite concerned to find so many dogs much too skinny and lacking substance. Charlies can be finicky eaters at times and sometimes it needs a bit of an effort to find what suits them to give them a chance to prosper and develop a decent body and coat. I am aware that presentation standards can vary but I do not tolerate dirty dogs and it is simply a waste of an entry fees!
